Famed General Howley, Former U. S.
 Commander in Berlin, to Speak
 At U.A.V. Convention

IMMIGRATION CHIEF SHAUGHNESSY ALSO TO SPEAK

The Third Annual Convention of the Ukrainian American Veterans on May 6th, 7th, 1950 at the Hotel New Yorker 34th Street and 8th Avenue will be highlighted by a banquet and ball at which General Frank L. Howley, former Director of the U. S. Military Government in Berlin, and the Hon. Edward J. Shaughnessy, Commander of the New York District of the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the U. S. Department of Justice, will appear as featured speakers.

Gen. Howley it is reported, will touch upon the importance of the Ukrainian situation.

The most colorful figure in American rule in Germany until his resignation in September, 1949, was this tough-skinned American who has been the subject of more vilification in the Berlin Soviet press than any other American—Brigadier General Frank L. Howley, Director of the U. S. Military Government in Berlin.

In the two years that he was American Commandant in the German capital—prior to this appointment, he was Deputy Commandant for two years—General Howley earned high respect among Allied leaders and Germans for his unyielding firmness in dealing with the Soviets. In either blarney (possible result of his County Cork ancestry) or billingsgate, the fast-talking General held his own with the Russians.

A veteran of the early occupation days, he had his first argument with the Russians at the Elbe when, as a Colonel, he wanted to bring his American convoy into Berlin. He won that argument. His last negotiations with the Russians continued for fourteen hours and took place on the night the Soviets walked out of the Allied Kommandatura, the four-power occupation government of Berlin.

New Jersey-born, General Frank L. Howley was graduated from New York University, studied art in Paris for a time and then entered the advertising business in Philadelphia. A Cavalry Reserve officer, he was and still is an enthusiastic horseman. Called to active Army duty in 1940, he arrived in Europe in 1944 and on D Day plus four he landed in France as commander of the largest combined British-American Civil Affairs team.

The man who has borne the brunt of differences with Soviet officers in countless hours round the conference table now returns home to tell America what he has learned in four years of four-power negotiation.

In addition to this most important appearance of General Howley and Mr. Shaughnessy at the U.A.V. Convention Banquet, a program of unusual interest for every Ukrainian American Veteran has been planned by the committee. All Ukrainians, young and old, newly arrived and those who have for years made America their home are urged to attend this vital function. For all information write direct to the U.A.V. Convention Committee at the Hotel New Yorker.

THE RENOWNED UKRAINIAN BANDURISTY — SET FOR THEIR SECOND AMERICAN TOUR

OMINOUS DEVELOPMENT IN UKRAINE

A few days ago the wires of the Associated Press reported an appeal for Western support by Stepan Bandera, a leader of the "Organization of Ukrainian Nationalists," and reputed leader of the Ukrainian anti-Soviet underground fighting the communist forces in Ukraine.

In two interviews which Mr. Bandera granted reporters in his heavily guarded hide-out in the Bavarian hills, he appealed to the United States specifically for aid to the Ukrainians fighting the Soviet forces. He said that his organization maintains close contact with the Ukrainian underground in Soviet Ukraine, and that it has valuable information regarding the mobilization of the Soviet Union for what he called "total war," which the Russians, he said, will start in the future.

He further stressed that the Ukrainians would fight on the side of the Allies, if they are assured of their national independence. So far, he added, the American authorities are shunning any commitments, stating unofficially that before they can cooperate with such an underground, orders to this effect must come from Washington.

Reports of Unrest and Discontent
 in Ukraine

Parallel with this appeal, the European press in such countries as England, Belgium, France and the Netherlands, is full of reports on the recent unrest and dissatisfaction among the Ukrainians against Moscow is especially evident in Western Ukraine, where the population is far from assimilated and where an active Ukrainian underground is still fighting the Russians. Recently, a party of high communist officials from Kiev visited Western Ukraine. Among them was D. Z. Manuilsky and Melnikov (who recently replaced Nikita Khrushchev as the secretary-general of the Communist Party in Ukraine). The purpose of the visit was to "inspire and encourage" the local leaders in their "zeal and devotion to the principles of Marxism-Leninism-Stalinism" as well as to demote those who proved inefficient in coping with the situation.

Worked Despite Illness

Every drama has its hero. There are plenty of heroes in the DP story in Western New York—

A DP and his wife recently caused no end of excitement in the Wyoming County dairy circles. The DP steadfastly refused to milk his sponsor's cows. It was beneath his dignity. Where he came from only women performed such chores. Someone finally explained that men often milked cows in the U.S.A. The DP turned happily to milking.

A hard-working farmhand in Chautauqua County collapsed in the fields, was hospitalized. Diagnosis: Perforated stomach ulcers.

"Why did you work so hard? Why didn't you ease up?" queried the American farmer when he visited his bedridden farmhand.

"Because," replied the newcomer to these shores, "I owe you and everybody so much for helping me, I didn't want to let you down."

The Rt. Rev. Eugene A. Loftus, the Resettlement Committee's executive director, put it this way when he returned from a visit to European DP camps:

"They're good people. They've a genius for survival. They had the physical stamina and moral courage to live through oppression during the war and to refuse to return to their countries behind

CLEVELAND YOUTH HELPING WITH U.N.A. CONVENTION

During the forthcoming Ukrainian National Association Convention in Cleveland, Ohio in May, a large number of young Ukrainian Americans who will not be delegates to the convention, will help make it an outstanding success.

The young people, led by Genevieve Zepko-Zarebnak, who are all members of the Ukrainian Youth League of Ohio, have undertaken the task of aiding the guests and delegates to the convention in all manners possible.

Reception committees, dance committees, and scores of other details will be looked after by the young people of Ohio in order that the delegates will have more time for their serious deliberations.

To Answer the Appeal

Especially because of the present stake of Soviet-American relations we believe that the Ukrainian case should be heard and the Ukrainians be given all possible assistance in their fight against a common enemy.

In this respect we should like to mention the article of William Henry Chamberlin, prominent American writer (his book: The Ukraine: A Submerged Nation), appearing in the current issue (Winter 1950) of The Ukrainian Quarterly, a scholarly publication of the Editorial

THE NEWLY ARRIVED

Once again we return to the subject of the newly-arrived Ukrainian immigrants, former displaced persons. We do so because their arrival and settlement here constitutes, what may be called an epochal event in the onward course of history of the Ukrainian American people.

Prior to their arrival, there were the old immigrants, the pioneers, and their American-born children, now quite mature. Pioneers are those who go before to remove obstacles and prepare the way for others. That the old immigrants, our fathers and mothers, accomplished in a manner which some chronicler or historian, perhaps even of the present age, will record as something unusually great.

They came here without the aid of anyone. They arrived here in steerages of the worst sort. They had no one here to give them a helping hand, to teach them the language, the customs of this, our country. They had no Ukrainian churches or national homes to go to. And they had no one to give them at least a dollar to tide them over until they were able to earn. But, they made the grade. That fact is a tribute to the courage, industry and resourcefulness of the Ukrainian people as a whole, down through the centuries, and today wherever they may be, whether under oppression behind the Soviet Russian Iron Curtain, or in the lands of the free.

Their sons and daughters, in all modesty must be also labelled as pioneers. In the sense that they, of Ukrainian immigrant homes and background and feelings, yet confronted with their American environment and their native Americanism, have managed nonetheless to adjust themselves to the situation, with the result that today they are fine native Americans and fine Ukrainians at that. Parenthetically speaking, the late Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada, once declared publicly that "if you want to be a good Canadian, you have to be a good Ukrainian. It is the same here in U.S.A. The Irish or the Jews here are a good example of this."

This parenthetical remark we pass on to our newly arrived Ukrainian immigrants. It should help to bolster their self-confidence and with it their morale. They feel very much that they are Ukrainian. Most of them undoubtedly long to return to the native land of their birth and upbringing, the land from which the fury of the war threw them out, and to which they will not return because they well know that as Ukrainian patriots, as Ukrainian independence, they will be liquidated, in one form or another, either immediately or prolonged, and become victims of the general Soviet Russian policy in Ukraine—genocide. Feeling as they do in this country that they are Ukrainian and realizing at the same time that now they are new Americans, they probably may be puzzled over the problem of their Ukrainianism and their Americanism. We assure them neither collides with one another, that the two form one harmonious whole.

Ukrainian Congress Committee of America, the article gives the conclusions of a trip. Mr. Chamberlin recently took to Europe where he met several Ukrainian leaders of all walks of life. He was impressed by their zeal and determination in their fight for freedom.

His recommendations to the American and other governments towards assistance of the Ukrainians deserves notice and study.

The Ukrainians should be treated as a separate nationality, and the "Voice of America" should continue to give broadcasts in Ukrainian.

Certificates of nationality and passports issued by the Ukrainian National Council should be accepted as valid.

A large number of Ukrainian scholars and specialists, especially those who possess a rich knowledge regarding Soviet methods in politics and economics, should be placed in the United States.

There should be facilities for the enlistment and training of Ukrainians as part of a American Foreign Legion in Germany and Austria.

And, finally "officially and unofficially" the right of the Ukrainians to self-determination should be specifically recognized.

Mr. Chamberlin writes that "no people in Europe have a better fighting anti-communist record than the Ukrainians," and that the Americans should realize that the Ukrainians are fighting what is now generally recognized as "the world threat of Stalinite communism," a threat that is aimed at the United States and its precious heritage of freedom and independence.

Language Is Biggest Barrier To Assimilation of DPs

The biggest handicap in resettlement of displaced persons in this country is the language barrier, notes Ed Kelley, staff writer of the Buffalo Evening News, in a recent number of that newspaper. The story is based on an interview he had with officials of the Resettlement Committee of the Catholic Buffalo Diocese, which during the past year placed 687 "at home" Western New York.

The largest contingent is from Poland—295 of them. The Ukrainian group of 275 is next, the Lithuanians third with 57.

Many of these DPs know no English, the Buffalo News reports. Some know a little. Few know the language well.

With results like this—

A DP working on a Cattaraugus County farm suddenly "blew up" at his sponsor, the farm owner. The farmer was dumbfounded. He'd gotten along famously with the DP, praised his hard work, even advised him to "take time off" to rest and enjoy himself.

Some DP Stories Comic

That's what did it. It was the farmer's counsel to "take time off" that made the DP so angry. The DP understood only the word "time." He thought the farmer wanted him to spend more of it at work. It was too much.

Too many believe all DP stories are tragic. But there's plenty of comedy when Old World ideas clash with those of the New—

A DP and his wife recently caused no end of excitement in the Wyoming County dairy circles. The DP steadfastly refused to milk his sponsor's cows. It was beneath his dignity. Where he came from only women performed such chores. Someone finally explained that men often milked cows in the U.S.A. The DP turned happily to milking.

Worked Despite Illness

Every drama has its hero. There are plenty of heroes in the DP story in Western New York—

A hard-working farmhand in Chautauqua County collapsed in the fields, was hospitalized. Diagnosis: Perforated stomach ulcers.

"Why did you work so hard? Why didn't you ease up?" queried the American farmer when he visited his bedridden farmhand.

"Because," replied the newcomer to these shores, "I owe you and everybody so much for helping me, I didn't want to let you down."

The Rt. Rev. Eugene A. Loftus, the Resettlement Committee's executive director, put it this way when he returned from a visit to European DP camps:

"They're good people. They've a genius for survival. They had the physical stamina and moral courage to live through oppression during the war and to refuse to return to their countries behind the Iron Curtain when the war was over."

Relatives Sometimes Separated

DPs have been proving his words daily—

One DP family, surveying the house in which they'd live, found no furniture to sit on. Just boxes. The American sponsor apologized, promised to get chairs immediately.

"No chairs," said the DP's "The boxes are good enough now. We'll sit on them until we can buy chairs ourselves."

Relatives are sometimes split up, go to different parts of the country. Frequently they are all that remain of their Old World family. Often, therefore, the tug of blood is stronger that the tug of commitments to one's sponsor, and DP's sometimes bolt their jobs before their year of service is up.

There are many heroic exceptions—

A DP on a Niagara County farm learned that his only brother was on a farm in the West. They cor-
