Ukrainian Underground Keeps Freedom Fires Burning

By HORST PETZAL and PAUL MESKIL

The Ukrainian insurgent army, Soviet Russia's anti-Communist underground, is operating a secret radio station to keep the fires of resistance burning. The station, Radio Free Kiev, broadcasts once or twice a week, each time from a different location in the mountains and forests of the vast Carpatho-Ukraine district.

In a special message to Ukrainian exiles meeting in Munich last week, the station branded dictator Nikita Khrushchev a liar for his claim that all Soviet peoples have embraced communism.

Free Kiev announced that the Ukrainian rebels are in contact with other underground groups throughout East Europe and that this network of freedom fighters is growing stronger every day.

The Ukrainian underground started in 1942 in Volhynia, near the pre-war Polish border, and fought both the Nazis and the Red Army. At one time, an estimated 200,000 guerrillas were under arms in the Carpathian Mountains.

Red Army troops smashed the rebel army after Soviet re-occupation of the Ukraine. The guerrilla commander, Gen. Taras Chuprynska, was ambushed and slain with his staff near Lviv in 1951.

Later, the resistance army reorganized and came down from the hills during the 1956 Hungarian revolution to blow up rails, ammunition trains and bridges on the main line from Russia to Hungary. The guerrillas freed hundreds of Hungarian prisoners who were being deported to the Soviet Union and helped them get back to Hungary or Czechoslovakia. Only last year the Soviet press pleaded for the Ukrainian insurgents to surrender.

Special emphasis will be laid on participation of Ukrainian youth groups in the rally. Design of the monument will be selected from sketches submitted to the Ukrainian Canadian Committee, which is offering prizes of $750, $500 and $250 for the best ideas. Booklet On Ukrainian Music Planned By UYL-NA Foundation

SCRANTON, Pa.—Plans for publication of a booklet on Ukrainian music and a special issue of The Ukrainian Trend were made here May 11 at an executive board meeting of the Ukrainian Youth League of North America Foundation Inc.

The music booklet, which is being prepared by Halia Pidduchna of Toronto, and the special Trend issue featuring a story on the Ukrainian Youth League of North America, will make their bow at the Youth League's Silver Anniversary Convention in Cleveland during the Labor Day weekend.

The board decided that articles on the history, construction and playing of the bandura, which will be included in forthcoming issues of the Trend, should be combined and published in booklet form later this year.

Joseph Smindak of Brooklyn, secretary-treasurer, reported that the Foundation's legal advisor, John O. Flis of New York, had filed a tax exemption claim for the Foundation.

In connection with the "Soyuzivka" Ukrainian Cultural Courses which are sponsored by the Ukrainian National Association in cooperation with the Foundation, the board discussed possibilities of securing a group leader who would direct the students' after-class activities and teach them Ukrainian songs, dances and crafts.

It was decided to initiate a project for this year's students—a comprehensive report on the course, to be prepared by all the students and presented by one of them at the UYL-NA convention in Cleveland.

Reporting for Dorothy Olen, chairman of the convention concert, Michael Zaderecky of Parma, O., said that the Hanna Auditorium in Cleveland will be booked for the concert. He said Miss Olen has lined up local choirs, dance groups, singers and musicians for the concert program on August 31.

William Mural of Parma was appointed advertising manager of the Trend, and Jennie H. Kohut of Rochester, N. Y., was assigned to compile material for a booklet on Ukrainian Christmas customs.

Reporting officers included Walter Bacad of New York, vice-president; Stella Zacharuk of Elizabeth, N. J., cultural director; and Helen Perozak of Jackson Heights, N.Y., Trend editor. The meeting was conducted by Joseph Gurski of Detroit, president.
