Wildwood: The Ukrainian Riviera

Wildwood Crest is not just a beach town like the hundreds of others that dot the New Jersey shore. Luxurious motels along the oceanfront, small homes along clean quiet streets, miles of white-sanded beaches, a 75' surf and a community of Ukrainian sun-worshippers make it of special interest to us.

The town is the southernmost of The Great Wildwoods which during the year are quiet sleepy communities of about 18,000 people. During the summer months, prices quadruple as the population rises close to the half-million capacity of the three townships. And according to some estimates, 5,000 of the summer vacationers are Ukrainians.

Vacationing Ukrainians gather in front of one of the six Ukrainian establishments on Crocus Street.

They come from all parts of the United States and Canada — from Irvington to Iowa to Toronto.

"How do Ukrainians in Canada find out about this area," I asked Adriana Skaab, a University of Montreal student spending several weeks here. "I guess it's the grapevine method," she said. "We heard of Wildwood from friends who live in Jersey City!"

By a combination of grapevine and advertising in Ukrainian newspapers, owners of the approximately 25 establishments here have a full house during the summer months, and in fact it's often hard to find accommodations unless early reservations are made.

There is a very simple technique for finding other Ukrainians in Wildwood. The first is to walk along the beach until you reach a long fishing pier that juts out into the ocean. Under and near this pier will note groups of middle-aged men in swimming trunks and brimmed caps huddling together, discussing intensely and gesticulating wildly. As you come closer, you can hear

Tourist in Soviet Receives Execution Sentence

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — The June 1969 issue of "Visti z Ukrainy," reports that Andrey Litowka, 58, of Cleveland who was arrested by Soviet authorities in Sept. 1968 while on a group tour of Ukraine, has been sentenced to be executed for alleged collaboration with the Nazis during World War II.

The court which handed down the sentence claimed that evidence had been found that Litowka, as a member of the police force under German occupation of Ukraine in World War II had taken part in the elimination of 800 of his countrymen.

As reported in Cleveland's Plain Dealer of Nov. 3, 1968, which quotes Mr. Litowka's daughter, Mrs. Luba Sereda of Parma, Ohio, Mr. Litowka had been on the police force consisting of former kulaks

New School Offers Course

NEW YORK, N.Y. — A semester course entitled "The History of the Ukraine" is being off this fall beginning Sept. 30 at the New School for Social Research, located at 66 W. 12th Street in New York.

The aim of this fall's course, as stated in the New School catalog, is "to explore the Ukrainian problem and to define the concept of 'Ukrainianism' in cultural, ethnic, linguistic, social and political terms. The lectures have organized to provide an opportunity to assess the strengths and weaknesses of Ukrainian nationalism, to criticize the character and objective of forces opposed to Ukrainian independence and to evaluate the present state of the Ukrainian people within the framework of the Soviet Union."

The course was offered on an experimental basis last spring in a series of six lectures by Prof. Huttenbach, some of whose assertions aroused a great deal of controversy both at the lectures and in the entire Ukrainian community.

Tuition for the semester course is $60 plus a $7 registration fee for non-credit students. Fall registration will take place between Aug. 25 and Sept. 12. In-person registration begins Sept. 2 and ends Oct. 7.

APOLLO AFTERTHOUGHTS

times stronger than the first satellite rocket). At this point was developed the complex hardware of the Lunar Module and the navigational, communication, computer, and radar systems for the moon landing. Even engineers marvel at the amazing speed with which delicate and giant components were invented and tested during the last few years to produce the triumphantly successful space vehicle and final moon landing. So it is easy to see that, even superficially, the moon expedition had something in common with the moon itself. I believe, however, that there was a deeper, more fundamental and unconscious reason for our fascination. The moon landing thrilled people because it symbolized a dramatic victory in man's struggle against fate and the unknown. Man's earliest myths, such as that of Prometheus, exalt the heroes who attempted to escape the limits of their own environment. Central to these struggles against fate and nature is man's immensely powerful wish for immortality. Man can accept almost any suffering or inconvenience except the fact that he must die. He will go to great lengths to avoid or postpone death. This desire for immortality is abundantly expressed in literature and religion since ancient times. The many versions of Faust, in which man sells his soul to the devil in return for immortality, are a good example of this preoccupation. Every person must sooner or later deal with the problem of his death, even as a young adult. A college student, for example, must decide what field or career he will pursue. Someone interested in many different fields must make a painful choice for he knows he has only one lifetime to do his work. Man finds it difficult to accept the limitation of time. Humanity thrills when nature's limits are pushed back in any area. Whenever a major breakthrough occurs, such as the development of antibiotics, the discovery of the DNA molecule, heart transplants, or development of jet travel, men are fascinated because all these advances represent increased control over nature and her limitations on us. Our wonder, awe and joy over the moon expedition originate, I believe, in such basic sentiments. This gigantic and dramatic conquest over the limitation of space and geography makes the limit of time more vulnerable to conquest. Unconsciously, our hearts leap in wild optimism at the delicious thought of living two lifetimes or even forever. And so we rejoice.

Volleyball Getting $$$ Boost

Although volleyball was invented in the United States in 1895, it has remained here, with few exceptions, a game played mostly on picnics, at secondary schools and summer camps, while most of the rest of the world has developed the sport to a high proficiency. In 1964 volleyball became an Olympic event, stimulating added interest in the sport in the United States. The beginnings were not very successful. In 1964, the U.S. finished ninth among ten countries competing. In 1968, in Mexico City, the Americans finished seventh. One of their victories was an impressive win over the USSR in men's competition. Now a college chemistry professor has undertaken the hard task of trying to improve the international calibre of American volleyball teams. James Coleman, 37, who teaches at Chicago's George Williams College, will conduct a $3 million summer sports camp program to instruct inner city youngsters between 12 and 18 years of age. The needed financial help came from the White House, and no doubt with President Richard M. Nixon's hearty approval, since he is considered "the greatest sports buff ever to win the presidency." Coleman's camps will instruct in the techniques of track and field, basketball, swimming, gymnastics, soccer, touch football, hockey and Mr. Coleman's favorite sport, volleyball. Vice President Spiro T. Agnew will oversee the program to be directly supervised by Apollo Astronaut James A. Lovell. It will be conducted at more than 120 colleges, universities and junior colleges, which will donate equipment and facilities. Coleman is certain that a number of potential Olympians will be discovered for the sport of volleyball. Coleman feels that, since the 1968 Olympic Games, the caliber of volleyball played in the United States has shown great improvement.

One Way To Win

Moscow's top soccer teams have been accused of deliberately trying to weaken visiting teams from the provinces and other republics by providing poor pre-game accommodation and facilities. The controversy broke in the Georgian sports newspaper "Lelo" which published a letter complaining that Moscow teams "have worked out tactics of raising obstacles to weaken their opponents" before they get on the field, according to a Reuters report. Replying to the criticism, the official Soviet sports newspaper "Soviet Sports" said hotel booking was not well organized, but claimed that some players with their "whimsical" demands expected better treatment than a lot of other sportsmen.

The letter came from a team physician, Dr. Z. Telia, who traveled to Moscow last month with his local Georgian team, Tbilisi Dynamo, and watched them trounced 3-0 by league-leaders Moscow Spartak. Dynamo is in second place, Soviet Sports, claiming that the game was played during the Moscow film festival and hotels were full of guests, resorted to the usual "threat" claiming that it had received many letters from Georgian fans demanding an investigation of the "fanning of unhealthy passions." Sounds familiar!!!

Ukrainian Pianist to Appear on Austrian Radio

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — Ukrainian pianist Luba Zuk of Montreal, has departed for Europe to appear once again on the Austrian State Radio, following two successful appearances last fall and winter. The earlier invitations came in the wake of a favorable response in the press to Miss Zuk's performances at an international conference "Tradition and Contemporary Society" held at Neudorf, in southern Austria in June 1968. For her first performance over the Austrian Radio, Miss Zuk chose works of Ukrainian and Canadian composers: Barvinsky, Fomenko, Hrudin and Shampan.
