their organization's future activities.

According to Kulish, "we welcome the change in SUSTA. After talking with Nestor, we see that SUSTA is indeed striving to become a neutral federation where students representing different political and social views can get together to mediate all points of view and still end up cooperating."

The new student "domivka" and coffee house is designed to serve as just such a neutral forum in Philadelphia, Kulish said.

He said the students obtained the rooms at Lindley and Broad streets for one-dollar per month through the effort of Dr. Walter Gallan, president of the United Ukrainian American Relief Committee.

"We are active," Kulish said, "but in a different way than the New York City Hromada. There is a totally different atmosphere here in Philadelphia, we never had the combustion that is being generated in New York."

According to Kulish, the Ukrainian students in Philadelphia are concentrating on what he termed a "fusionist movement, to unite all student factions."

Kulish said that cooperation with Ukrainian organizations in Philadelphia has been exceptional.

Plan Opening

The "domivka" and coffee house will open May 16 and 17, Kulish said, adding that a student magazine, "Puhach," edited by Orest Kulyniak is slated to appear at about the same time.

Tomyez said that a lot of good will was generated by the meeting. He said he plans to make more such trips to get a first-hand look at what Ukrainian students are doing.

According to Tomyez, SUSTA's western organizational conference will take place May 16 in Chicago.

The SUSTA Magazine, scheduled to be out in March, has been delayed due to the resignation of editor Andrew Vytvytsky but Tomyez said that if negotiations with the Svoboda Press are successful such a magazine may be printed in the middle of May.

Install Traffic Light For Newark Parish

Newark's Mayor Hugh J. Addonizio, shown above, was on hand Wednesday, April 15, to turn on the traffic light on Sandford Avenue and Ivy Street, the site of St. John the Baptist Ukrainian Catholic Church and its school. The parish's appreciation for the installation of the traffic light at this busy intersection was expressed by the Rev. Yaroslav Dybka, OSsB, of St. John's, and Sister M. Neonelia, OSBM, principal of the school. The school's entire student body was on hand to witness the ceremony. Mayor Addonizio is seeking re-election in the May 12th election.

tration; she is of Serbian descent.

Mrs. Bentley spoke of the advantages America offered its immigrants and of the policies of the Republican Party. The meeting was under the sponsorship of Laszlo Pasztor, director of the Heritage Groups Division.

At the Women's Leadership Council meeting, problems of women's equal rights, responsibilities and participation in the political life of America were discussed.

The Ukrainian women took part in discussions, question and answer periods and spoke to officials and conference participants about various problems, including Ukraine.

Protests Celebration

any political liberalism in some other Communist country is labeled by the Russians as "deviation from Leninism." Even such a sympathizer of humanism as the late Bertrand Russell, upon his return from a visit to Russia, noted that Communist progress costs too many human sacrifices.

In my opinion, if the UNESCO tribute to Lenin will take place, it will be the greatest paradoxical honoring of our century and a mockery of humanity.

I am asking persons of good will to protest such an undeserved tribute by writing letters to the secretary general of the United Nations.

REV. CLOONEY

change of mentality. In its rush to become the great urban nation that it is now, it sacrificed individualism along the way," muses Fr. Clooney.

He had been interested in the Eastern Church and the historical question of its break and possible union with the West when still in college. His first exposure to the Eastern Rite came when he attended a mass at a Russian Mission in Boston.

It was soon afterwards that he met with the Rev. Roman Dyky of Manchester, New Hampshire, while visiting his parents who had moved there. Fr. Dyky's friendship had a profound influence on Fr. Clooney's decision to become a priest. But it was "the fact that the Ukrainian Church satisfied in me a spiritual need that the Latin Rite did not," that prompted him to become a Ukrainian priest.

Fr. Clooney is in a unique position in that he has a new and fresh perspective on the Ukrainian Catholic Church and community.

In a very positive sense, he believes "that the Ukrainian Catholic Church has great spiritual and cultural values which could benefit the entire Church."

"Ukrainians have much to offer in the expression of their religion, in their strong family traditions, and in their rich historical heritage," says Fr. Clooney.

He feels, however, "that the present problems lie in the fact that our great potential — and there is great potential in our Church — has not yet been fully realized; the Church has not exerted itself as much as it could toward specific goals, and unless the Church involves itself with the problems of its members, our potential will not be realized."

Put Trivia Aside

Moreover, Fr. Clooney observed that "in concerning ourselves with trivial issues we have become splintered, ignoring the important issues. With a provincial attitude with personal rivalries, and without effective leadership we can not assert ourselves. History is not kind to weakness and unless we can unite and assert our own autonomy we will not be able to grow."

In the search for solutions to the problems which the Ukrainian people face, Fr. Clooney sees "no panaceas or simplistic measures which will solve our problems overnight. We can, however, and must recognize provincialism as the enemy of the Ukrainian Catholic Church. We must share our culture with others in order to grow, and we must not rely on language alone to impart our national culture. By giving our children an understanding of their culture and by strengthening their personal security and happiness in the family circle, we will never have to fear assimilation because secure and happy children will never reject their heritage."

As Fr. Clooney explained, the Archbishop, because of a shortage of priests, must move his clergy around to where they are most needed.

And so as the need elsewhere became greater, Fr. Clooney was reassigned and made pastor of the Holy Epiphany Ukrainian Catholic Church in St. Petersburg, Florida.

While frequent reassignments prevent the parish priest from getting deeply involved with his people, it is a situation that we must live with. Certainly the Ukrainian Catholic faithful of Jersey City will miss Fr. Clooney, and we wish him good luck at his new post.
