White House Conference Tackles Problems of Aging People

WASHINGTON, D. C. — From November 28 to December 2, the 1971 White House Conference on Aging was held in Washington, D.C., in which 3,400 delegates from all walks of life participated.
The conference, divided into 14 sections and many sub-sections, was held in the four largest hotels in the nation's capital — the Washington Hilton, Statler Hilton, Shoreham and Sheraton Park. Part of the delegates were appointed by their respective governors, while others were named directly by the White House.
In the latter groups were three Ukrainians — Dr. Anthony Zukowsky of Steele, N.D., Stephen Kuropas of Chicago, Ill., and Dr. Walter Dushnyk of New York who was appointed earlier to the Technical Committee on Research of the Conference.
Series of Improvements
According to official statistics, there are 20 million persons in the U.S. who are 65 years old or over, most of whom live in sub-standard conditions.
Each sub-section at the Conference dealt with a particular aspect of aging: income, health; employment and retirement; housing, transportation, nutrition; retirement roles and activities; education, spiritual well-being, planning; research and demonstration, and government and non-government organizations — all pertaining to the aging section of the population.
Each of these topics were discussed and analyzed thoroughly, and a series of practical resolutions were adopted, thus constituting the official position of the conference on this vital problem.
These resolutions demand a series of improvements in the treatment of older people in America, such as better housing facilities, health care, increase of social security benefits to at least $150 a month per person, removal of taxes on property owned by the elderly, better employment and educational facilities, free Medicare medicine, and the like.
On Thursday, December 2, President Nixon addressed the plenary session of the conference, stating that the

Magazine Says Vatican "Sacrificing" Ukrainian Catholics

NEW YORK, N.Y. — "The Vatican seems to be willing to sacrifice the allegiance of the 5 million Ukrainian Rite Catholics in the Soviet Union" for concessions from Moscow, says Newsweek magazine in its December 6th issue.
Discussing the Vatican's Ostpolitik in its section on religion, the magazine analyzes the slowly emerging implications of the Vatican's diplomatic offensive which started apparently last March when Archbishop Agostino Casaroli, the Pope's diplomatic troubleshooter, made the first official visit to Moscow since 1926.
Closer Ties
"It was clear from the outset," says Newsweek, "that the emissaries of Pope Paul VI were maneuvering to obtain closer ties between Rome and the 60 million Catholics who live in Soviet-bloc countries, but outsiders were not sure just how much the church was willing to give up in return. . . . It appears that the Vatican is willing to undercut the authority of local church officials to regain close supervision over church affairs in Eastern Europe's traditionally Catholic countries."
The magazine sees in the release of the Hungarian primate Jozef Cardinal Mindszenty the possible restoration of full diplomatic relations between Hungary and the Vatican.
It goes on to state that the Vatican has asked the Kremlin for recognition of 21 diocesan bishops in the Soviet Union, for fewer restrictions on seminaries and for permission to establish apostolic consulates in Lithuania and Estonia.
"In return," says the ma-

Lesia Ukrainka Commemorated At Scholarly Conference

OTTAWA, Ont. — Since the beginning of this year Ukrainians all over the world have been honoring the memory of Lesia Ukrainka, one of their nation's greatest poets and playwrights. Concerts, recitals, displays, dramatic presentations, and various literary gatherings have been dedicated to the commemoration of the 100th anniversary of Lesia Ukrainka's birth.
Stylistic Aspects
The second paper in this session was devoted to the analysis of specific stylistic aspects in Lesia Ukrainka's works, entitled "Dialogue and Aphorisms in Lesia Ukrainka's Stone-Master and the Delivered by Mrs. A. Horokhowych, M.A., from Toronto."
The afternoon session commenced with a study analyzing the mythological substratum of Lesia Ukrainka's treatment of the Don Juan theme entitled "Lesia Ukrainka's Stone-Master and the Don Juan Myth," presented by Robert Karpiak, M.A., of Ottawa.
In the absence of its author, Prof. Yuriy Bojko of Munich, his study devoted to the stylistic progression in Lesia Ukrainka's writing, entitled "Lesia Ukrainka as the Creator of her Original Literary Style" was delivered by Prof. Bida.
The concluding presentation of the conference was the result of research made by Prof. A. Wilcher of Montreal on the subject of Lesia Ukrainka in Yiddish translation.
During his delivery and the ensuing discussion, Prof. Wilcher highlighted the work of the Jewish poet Hofstein and his renditions of Lesia Ukrainka's poetic and dramatic masterpieces.
Fuller Understanding
By way of paying tribute to Lesia Ukrainka, the conference resulted in the contribution of new and original research material toward a fuller understanding and appreciation of her works and creative genius.
It is hoped that this contribution will soon be published in a volume, thereby enriching the currently available bibliography of scholarly studies on one of the greatest figures in the history of Ukrainian literature.

A Hundred Worth a Million

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — It's not the gift that counts, says the old adage, but the idea that's behind it.
A most appropriate illustration of the adage came recently in the form of a letter from Poland addressed to Svoboda. It contained a bill for 100 zloty—a gift from a group of Ukrainian high school students in Poland for the Ukrainian Studies Chair Fund.
"We have learned from Svoboda," says the letter addressed to the USCF, "that you must collect a great deal of money for the realization of the project of establishing a Center of Ukrainian Studies at Harvard. Please accept from us, Ukrainian students, this symbolic gift of 100 zloty."
The students regret that they can not send more, "but we shall ask the Almighty to help you realize this great idea."
"We call on our brothers and sisters in America to be generous in their contributions for this Ukrainian Scholarly Center, because it is a project of great value, patriotic and indispensable at the present time."
Above is the photostatic copy of the 100 zloty bill sent by a group of Ukrainian high school students in Poland as their "symbolic contribution" toward the establishment of the Ukrainian Studies Center at Harvard.
