USSFA Laxity Results In Loss For Ukrainians

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — The Ukrainian Nationals of Philadelphia were deprived of an opportunity to win its fifth national soccer championship when the game they won over the United German-Hungarians in Oakford, Pa. on March 5th was awarded to the losers by the "green table" ruling of the Open Challenge Cup Committee of the USSFA.

Because an OCC decision is always final, and there is no avenue of appeal, all subsequent evidence submitted to the OCC and the USSFA proving that the Ukrainians were victimized and should not have been punished, were ignored by the silent treatment.

The game was taken away from the Ukrainians and handed to the Hungarians (under the circumstances it would normally be replayed) because one player was deemed "ineligible" to play. This ineligibility resulted, however, through the negligence and laxity of persons not connected with the Ukrainian Nationals.

When the Nats manager Jurezak arranged to have the services of NASL Dart player Deleon on a loan basis last September, he was compelled to send to Dart Manager Sutherland a signed but undated Player Release Form.

The Ukrainian Sports Club "Dnipro" of Baltimore eliminated the United German-Hungarians from the National Open Challenge Cup competition with a 1-0 victory on April 9th, scored on the loser's home grounds, thus avenging the Philadelphia Ukrainian Nationals' defeat.

Premier Trudeau Visits Toronto Home For Elderly

TORONTO, Ont. — More than 100 Ukrainians, mostly elderly residents, greeted Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau as he visited the Ivan Franko Home for the Elderly in Toronto, Ont., shortly before Easter.

It was "just like a holiday," said Raisa Machula, a nurse at the home, opened in 1970 and named after one of Ukraine's most famous writers. The three-story structure was built at a cost of 1 million dollars, half of which came from city, provincial and federal grants...

Happy Mood In a jovial mood — some newspapers say he is already on a campaign trail — the Prime Minister spoke with many of the home's residents, kissed its administrator, hugged a boy, and took some TV shots with a reporter's camera.

New Iconostasis in Parma Is Covered by Gold

CLEVELAND, O. — When the new iconostasis is installed in St. Vladimir Ukrainian Orthodox Church in Parma, four months from now, it will be the largest of its kind in Cleveland and will be covered with 23-karat gold.

Artist Couple A Ukrainian artist couple, Serhij Makarenko and his wife Nadia Somko, have come to Cleveland from New York to coat the carvings on the iconostasis with the gold. It will take them four months and infinite patience to finish the delicate job.

Makarenko and his wife come from Ukraine, says the paper, where they started a distinguished artistic career after graduating from Kiev University's School of Art.

Nominated by GOP

CHICAGO, Ill. (N.O.) — Mrs. Lucy Reum, a Chicagoan who was born of Ukrainian parents in Edmonton, Alta., has been nominated by the Republican Party for Cook County Recorder of Deeds.

She is the daughter of Ukrainian parents, Michael M. Bellegay and Mary Pikulski. Her father, while in Canada, was an author, lecturer, and newspaper editor.

After completing her undergraduate work, Lucy entered graduate school at the University of Chicago, and did advanced work in history and government.

She married Walter, a lawyer and former state legislator, in 1939 and turned her attention from the classroom to the home.

Her abilities came to public notice during the recent Illinois Constitutional Convention, in which she was a delegate and vice-chairman of the legislative committee.

Now Lucy Reum is seeking what is probably the highest elective post ever sought by a woman in Cook County, at least as a member of a major political party.

Bridging of A Gap: Students Help Senior Citizens

NEW YORK, N.Y. — "We all have rights as human beings, whether we are millionaires or poor," an elderly babushka woman told a student social worker.

Lonely and needy like many of the over one million aging people in New York City, the woman is a client of a new community service program set up on the lower east side by the New York City Ukrainian Student Hromada to help elderly Ukrainians get some of their rights.

"There are a lot of old people in this community who are eligible for welfare, social security benefits or other social services," said Zirka Salak, president of the Student Hromada, "but they need help in getting these services, so we have established this program to do what we can to assist them."

The program, which is headed by Maria Hordinsky, a premed student at Fordham University, is headquartered at 33 East 7th Street in a hall donated by St. George's Ukrainian Catholic Church.

It is here every Wednesday afternoon that Miss Hordinsky and her co-workers, Andrij Weitiuk and Michael Terech listen to the neighborhood senior citizens who come to tell them of their problems. What they hear is not very pleasant, for it's usually the story of old people caught in the midst of America's urban decay.

A chronically ill woman who suffers from asthma said that when she was forced to spend a few weeks in the hospital for her condition "not one person from any parish, civic or fraternal organization came to visit me or ask whether I needed help, but when it comes to raising money they know where I am."

"Our young people are running away because they see what happens to the old in our community," she said, "Ukrainians in this country only worry about their money. We are losing our youth, and if that happens we will lose our whole world."

"Most of the people who come to us need help, with their social security or with city rent control," said Miss Hordinsky. "Usually we can help them by writing a letter or by filling out a form, since most of them have problems with English."

"We had a case a few weeks ago, where one woman who couldn't read English didn't bother to open her letters from the local social security office and was losing about $2,000 in benefits because she had not applied for them," Miss Hordinsky explained.

What we did in her case after she came to us was simply open her mail and answer the forms, and a little while later she received a $700 check from social security for those back payments which she was entitled to. The Hromada program has also helped a number of old people living in city rent controlled apartments in getting senior citizen rent increase exemptions which exclude people over 62 from paying a

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Ukrainian students at Columbia University have scheduled a showing of "Shadows of Forgotten Ancestors," the avant-garde film made in 1964 in the Dovzhenko Studios in Kiev. The film, which was acclaimed at many international film festivals, is based on the novel of the same title by the Ukrainian writer, Mykhailo Kotsiubynsky.

7 percent yearly increase. Elderly Ukrainians living on the lower east side, or what is more commonly called the east village, are trapped in a decaying neighborhood. Living on fixed incomes, they find that they can't move away as so many of their children and other middle class Ukrainians have, because of higher rents, and so they are forced to live in one of the city's highest crime areas, constantly in fear of being mugged or robbed by dope addicts or gangs of neighborhood kids.

In spite of their problems elderly New Yorkers are entitled to a number of rights and benefits, including reduced fares on the city's bus and subway system, a 50 percent reduction on real property taxes, and old age assistance in the form of extra income from the city's department of social services.

They are also eligible for New York State's Medicaid which covers the costs of physicians, dentists, nursing homes, out-patient or clinic services, home care, drugs, eye glasses, as well as the federal government's Medicare hospital and medical insurance, and the Department of Agriculture's food stamp program.

Apart from whatever assistance they are able to provide in dealing with the government agencies, the Hromada community service program offers old people something they may not be able to get anywhere else, a chance to talk to someone who will listen.

"Some of our clients tell us their life stories," Miss Hordinsky said. "Many of them are here in New York alone, having left behind whole families in Ukraine, but they spend their lives working and saving their money so that they might bring their middle aged children to the United States some day."
